Ron Boucher and Steve Ferrara are Navy doctors who recently returned from deployment to Kandahar, Afghanistan. They put together a riveting presentation which shows the efforts of both American and coalition medical teams currently operating in Afghanistan, as these teams provide medical care to sick and wounded coalition forces (which include Afghan National Army personnel) as well as many Afghan civilians. The presentation serves to educate the audience on the tremendous work being carried out each day by this international team, as well as to recognize the tremendous sacrifices being made each day by the soldiers on the battlefield.

This presentation was recently briefed to senior DOD leaders at the Pentagon.
